

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A corner joint includes two connecting parts, which are fixed to the respective hollow sections. The mitered hollow sections and the fixed connecting parts are interconnected by screws in such a way that the hollow sections can be braced against one another. Recesses and/or distribution channels for receiving and distributing adhesive are provided on at least one lateral surface of a connecting part.